We have long been able to read and create music scores on a computer using notation programs, but reading them while performing is often a problem because of the need to turn the pages without taking one's hands off of the instrument. The Footime Page/Score Turner is the newest solution to this problem, allowing you to turn the pages of your electronic score using a foot switch. If you have a projector, the entire class can follow the score together. - Music Education Technology, Sept/Oct 2006

USER COMMENTS

"... the final glitch in the whole reading process at gigs and concerts is now solved - Thanks to my new Footime footswitch."
- Steven Boswell, classical guitarist

"...It is a profoundly different experience to rehearse off the score with ease... I am truly grateful to the inventors of this marvellous device!..." - Nicholas Kitchen, violinist

"...I can lead the congregation and play my instrument without missing a beat..." - Wayne Brown, Worship Leader

"... I'm visually impaired... could barely fit one song verse on an 8.5x11 paper. But now, thanks to a computer, a huge monitor, and my Footime page turner, I no longer have to use up all that printer ink, and I don't have to turn pages!..." - Joseph DeRosa, Sparks, Nevada
